We have no doubt that the idea of a constant revival of religion will be regarded by many as a new doctrine, if not a new measure. Some lean, barren, cold-hearted formalists would look upon such a state of things as a most dreadful calamity. What! a constant revival! Alarming thought! What will the world yet come to They have suffered enough from the occasional revivals of which they have heard and read, and have mourned over this spirit of fanaticism and wild-fire which is turning the world upside down; what would become of them if we should have them constantly! That the church may be preserved from such a state of ruin they pray and labor most earnestly! Still the friends of vital piety need not be alarmed at this, for it is only the etFectual fervent prayer of The...
