A other things is distinguished as the founder of the first American School of Philosophy. He was vera causa of the MOS BRONSON ALCOTT above all New England School of Transcendentalism, and the most earnest advocate of its religio-philosophical ideas. He enlisted for it the sympathies and active support of his personal friend, Ralph Waldo Emerson, and others. This philosophy had little in concord with Kantism despite the latter doctrine is generally classified as transcendentalistic. Mr. Alcotts mental and philosophical attitude, and a distinguished authoritys definition of New England Transcendentalism, are one: characterized by the absence of a formal system of belief, a somewhat mystical phraseology, the exaltation of the spiritual in a general sense over the material, a tendency to synthesis of God, Nature and man, an acceptance of all human manifestations as natural and not immoral, an apotheosis of Nature, and a belief in...
