Not illustrated. 1914 Excerpt: .px = the loss of pressure, in pounds per square inch, when discharging against the pressure pt in the foot-piece, va = the velocity of air in the pipe, in feet per second, when discharging into the atmosphere, vx = the velocity of air in pipe, in feet per second, when discharging against the pressure pi, qa = the volume of free air discharged, in cubic feet per second, qx = the volume of air at pressure Pi, in cubic feet per second, r = the ratio of compression in atmospheres, the following proportion may be written: p.: vl r: : p: vl r Taking ra as 1, when discharging into the atmosphere, we have x v-q-q r a a ax Hence it was only necessary to divide the loss as taken from the curves in Fig. 19 by the ratio of compression, in order to find the loss of pressure when discharging against any pressure pi existing in the foot-piece. Loss of Head Due to Entrance.--The entrance to the tail-piece-was square edged during the first 318 runs and the loss of head due to entrance was, therefore, assumed to have been equal to one-half of the velocity head of the entering water. The maximum value of the velocity head during this series of runs barely amounted to one per cent. of the total head required to discharge the water. During the 1909 experiments the tail-piece projected into the water and the entrance head has been...
