This item is printed on demand - Print on Demand Neuware - Individually Bonded is a fascinating and captivating story, inspired by the events experienced by a small group of students attending a high school in the European coastal town of Grintpeurt. These students spontaneously came together from diverse walks of life to form a team of friends. Drawn to each other through sheer gut instincts and first impressions, they were initially unable to explain the reasons they were drawn to each other. Sometime later, they realized it was because of sharing a variety of traditional values. As classmates, they followed their hearts and their desires to form friendships with a few other students to fulfill a need to develop social skills. This friendship lead to some exciting encounters, events, and activities. Their adventures strengthened the cohesiveness of the group as a close-knit circle of friends. It evolved into solid, long lasting friendships between these individuals. In some cases, the friendship gravitated to more serious relationships including marriage. Unintentionally, two of these friends, a girl and a boy, stood out and became the core of the group. Without realizing it, the time this circle of friends spent and experienced together during four years of high school eventually supported them in life after graduation. Despite more than twenty years of separation after they entered adult society, including moving away, some to far-off places, a desire to get together again became reality. That reunion of these strongly bonded individuals included their families. They returned for a one-time only reunion in the city of Grintpeurt-where they came together originally-the town where their high school was located. 330 pp. Englisch.
